My legal practice was split between technology and cross-border regulatory advising.

As a tech lawyer, I focused on regulatory issues in antitrust/competition involving digital platforms and tech companies as well as data privacy/protection for numerous Fortune 500 companies.

Separately, my practice also covered regulatory advising and transnational investigations involving US white collar law, particularly at the nexus of national and economic security. I focused on economic sanctions (especially involving Russia, Iran, and the Magnitsky Act), export controls, and anti-money laundering.
